

Order Returns to Detroit as the U. S. Troops Move In

Only persons with legitimate reasons, such as going to or from work, are permitted on the streets during the curfew hours of 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. This war-plant employe is showing his badge to a soldier. The arrival of U. S. troops to supplement the State and Detroit police and the State Troops quickly restored the city to near-normal.

An Army jeep and scout car, two of the many which U. S. troops used to restore order, are ready for patrol duty. Law and order returned to Detroit after the Army moved into the trouble areas by order of President Roosevelt.

A car overturned by hoodlums burns at Woodward and Stimson. They fired the auto after dragging out a Negro woman.

Another auto is overturned by hoodlums on Woodward avenue. Lawlessness of this kind was frequent during the rioting.

Only persons with legitimate reasons, such as going to or from work, are permitted on the streets during the curfew hours of 10 p. m. to 6 a. m. This war-plant employe is showing his badge to a soldier. The arrival of U. S. troops to supplement the State and Detroit police and the State Troops quickly restored the city to near-normal.

An Army jeep and scout car, two of the many which U. S. troops used to restore order, are ready for patrol duty. Law and order returned to Detroit after the Army moved into the trouble areas by order of President Roosevelt.

A car overturned by hoodlums burns at Woodward and Stimson. They fired the auto after dragging out a Negro woman.

Another auto is overturned by hoodlums on Woodward avenue. Lawlessness of this kind was frequent during the rioting.

News Staff Photos

A mob runs from tear gas on Woodward avenue near Stimson avenue during the rioting. When police dispersed mobs, new ones formed a few blocks away.